

Louisiana Tech University

Music faculty members to perform under Winter Night

Posted on January 17th, 2013 by Judith Roberts | Categorized under General News, Liberal Arts

While the cold brisk air blows across the water of Lady of the Mist in front of Howard Auditorium, sounds of classical instruments will be heard to add to Ruston's winter night experience.

Louisiana Tech University department of music faculty members Randall Sorensen, who plays the trumpet, and Shayla Blake, who plays the piano, will present a free concert inspired by a winter night at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 22 in Howard Auditorium.

Sorensen said he enjoys performing music that is based on non-musical influence such as seasons.

“As I explored music for trumpet and piano from my library and more recently composed works a theme emerged that seemed to fit the timing of the event in the winter month of January,” Sorensen said.

The concert will feature music from British composers Howard Blake and Cecilia McDowall and American composers David Snow and Richard Peaslee.